Ranchi, Feb 10: In a first, the principal of Marwari College Ranchi Prof Dr Manoj Kumar has launched a special initiative to help the underprivileged students of the university through Uniform Banks.

Initially started to help a few students of the college who could not afford uniforms to sit in the mid-semester exams, and the bank has till now helped over 60 students.

Principal Kumar, explained while talking to Lagatar correspondent, said, "We initially began because we wanted to help one of the students who did not attend the mid-semester exams. When asked for the reason, he said that he could not afford the uniforms. He chose not to attend the exams because of the rules of the college that need students to be in uniform to attend an exam."

"This led to us asking for old uniforms from the pass-out students, who did not need them anymore. Soon, the number of students in need began increasing. Hence, we decided to collect amounts from the teachers of the college. They were asked to donate some money if they could to a couple of teachers. This money was used to buy uniforms to form a Uniform Bank to supply uniforms to several other students," Principal Kumar added.
